When time comes to compromise, you need to choose cheap last minute airfares the period before and after the busy summer season. This is the perfect time to travel Europe because in this time the price gets lower. However Southern Europe also offers a nice experience in the winter, with reasonably mild weather. Do you think the weather is very important to get cheap airfares? Then the winter is one of the worst times to visit northern Europe. It is very common to find gray, wet and cold weather during the month of December to February at Europe. The supply of daylight is very short supply. This is why you have to spent all of your time indoors particularly in evenings.

If you are limited to a winter vacation, Italy or Greece would be good choices as a winter travel with the best prices. However there are some other benefits to winter travel because winter festivals and New Year's are exciting times in Europe. During the Christmas holidays, cities like Paris are beautiful decorated. Mostly whole Paris gets excited with parties, festivals and night life in the eve of New Year. Not only in Paris will you find several other countries that have holiday events and festivals as well during such time. You will see very few other tourists in such season which is one of the biggest advantages of winter travel. You will be more authentic considering European life without the crush of people. Especially in the north of Europe people find chilly and wet in the early spring, so streets are free from crowded. Although you may not get swim but still the weather is fine for outdoor tours and enjoying the scenic view. Of course the price is so low during this time and it will be the perfect time for those travelers who are budget-minded. Even you can get the cheaper prices for airfare and hotels also. If you want to visit most European countries then month of May and June will be the best time for you. During this time the weather is warm on most of the continent of Europe and uncrowded. You can enjoy many varieties of festivals and cultural events throughout Europe in May and June. You can get good deals on accommodations and plane fare in this time because the tourist season hasn't started into full swing in this time. The other benefit is few lines at most tourist attractions and plenty of room on tours and in restaurants. Make sure that Europe will again full of crowd quickly once schools opened. During the summer everyone gets busy and hotels get booked quickly. Even everything became expensive because of the demand in the su

However Northern Europe would be a good option for summer travel because of its good weather and smaller crowds in this time. Whatever season you choose, there are more than enough attractions to provide a great European holiday. mmer. Tourist destinations are very crowded and you will wait in lines at many attractions.
